

Boys Development Project consultant

Neil Davidson has been involved in developing work with boys and young men since 1982. He was a co-founder of Working With Men which supports the development of work with men and boys through training, consultancy and the production of resources. He was a full-time consultant for Working with Men from 1991 to 2006.

Publications include:

The Extra Large Guide to Sex and Relationships for Young Men... Working With Men (2008)

'Involving Young Men' in Teenage Pregnancy and Reproductive Health, Eds. Baker et al. RCOG Press (2007)

Man2Man – An investigation into the views of fathers and sons about the father's role in sex and relationship education. Working With Men (2006)

Editor for Working with Young Men a journal for professionals working in education criminal justice and social inclusion. Working With Men (2002-06)

Building Bridges – Integrating school, sex and relationship education and contraceptive services for young men Working With Men (2003)

Building Bridges Pack & Game Working With Men (2003)

'Promoting Men's Health' (with Trefor Lloyd) Balliere Tyndall (2000)

'Health-related resources for MEN' (with Trefor Lloyd) Health Education Authority, (1999)

'Fatherhood Game and Pack' (with Trefor Lloyd) Working With Men (1999)

'Men's Sexual Health Matters' Healthlink (1998)

'Vitality and Virility – Sexual Health for Mid-life Men' Ace Books (1995)

'Boys Will Be ...? – Sex Education and Young Men' Working With Men (1991 reprinted 1997)

Neil specialises in sexual health focusing on the development of practical approaches to engage young men. Learning from the development of programmes, resources and investigations is disseminated by Neil through training and consultancy. Currently he is employed part-time as a Sex and Relationships Education Consultant by a local authority. Recent other work includes contributing to the Teenage Pregnancy Units' media campaign work, running training programmes in Ukraine and South Africa on the development of sexual health work with young men.

Neil Davidson, ndavidson@boysdevelopmentproject.org.uk